WHOLESALE MURBERS PLANNED.

Before being delivered up to justice Schenck also confessed to the police that he had planned five murders for the week ending with January 9th last, which were to provide him with 30,000 florins. With this sum he intended to escape to America with Emily Hochsmann, his sweetheart. Two of his intended victims are daughters of respectable families. One is a servant to the Baroness Malfatti, whose chambermaid he had induced to steal pearls worth 20,000 florins, which the imperial family had presented to Dr. Malfatti for attending Napoleon's son, the Duke of Reichstadt, during his last illness. The maid, who had lived in the family twelve years, was so trusted that the pearls were not missed until Schenck's arrest gave a clew to the robbery. She had prepared everything for Schenck and his accomplice's reception in the house on the very night he was arrested. Schenck said to her he would give all the inmates, herself includ-WHOLESALE MURDERS PLANNED.

CONFESSION OF THE BROTHER.

Schenck acted by minutely-prepared plans, and several times he plotted against one girl even before he had disposed of another who seemed ready to give up all to him. His brother has confessed to having helped him to dispose of the body of the cook, Ketterl, whom they threw into the Danube. A man answering Schenck's description was seen from a railway train near Lundenburg, on the Northern railway, wrestling with a woman whom he seemed to stab. This affair was not cleared up, because the police sent from the station where the train stopped could find no trace of murderer or victim. Schenck confesses to having murdered a woman near Lundenburg, but refuses to give details. The principal witness against Schenck will be Emily Hochsmann, whom he first enticed, like his other victims, but finding her poor, yet attractive, spared her life, and even spent upon her much of the money obtained by his terrible crimes. VIENDA, April 22.—Higo Schenck and Karl Schlossarek were executed to-day for murders almost innumerable.

The condemned men rose at an early hour this morning and received the ministers, who offered religious consolation. An altar had been fitted up in the prison, and mass said. Both partook of the sacraments and prayed fervently.

On the way from their cells to the place of execution the condemned men answered responses to the "Office for the Dead." which the priests were reciting. After the usual preliminaries were gone through, the word was given, and the prisoners were drawn up and slowly strangled to death. Schenck was rather good looking and hardly thirty years of age. He was tall, well-mannered and spoke fluently several languages. In fact, he was the sort of a man to win the hearts of young servant-girls, inexperienced seamstresses, shop girls and such like, and it was among this class of womanhood that this fiend in human shape sought his victims. followed him. He took some of her money, 1800 florins in all, and lodged her in a remote suburb, visiting her sometimes. The landlady states that Rosa Ferenczy suspected him when absent, but whenever he showed himself she always believed him. At Christmas he took her to the theaters and the opera, promising to visit his sister in her company soon. She prepared for departure, and said, crying, to the landlady: "You'll either see me happy and married, or never again." The landlady recognized Schenck and Schlossarek as the two men with whom Rosa drove to the station. Next day her body was found in the Danube, near Presbourg. The sums which Schenck obtained by his murders, and which he must have divided with his brother and his accomplice, Schlossarek, do not amount to 6000 florins. But he never worked and lived comfortably, often traveling, for three years at least, as also did his accomplices. He must, therefore, have obtained money by other means, or many other murders, to which no clew is as yet obtained.

Schlossarek, the locksmith, was a more determined character than Schenck, but his wire, who is ignorant of his crimes, was difficult to deal with. In her despair she seemed ready to kill her babe for being a murderer's child. It is declared that a hand of at least sixteen persons all lived in one house in the remote suburp of Rudolphsheim, near Vienna, and planned these murders, and that Schenck was the member intrusted with the work of entiring the girls away and murdering them with Schlossarek's aid. " Pure water should be available of all times, but this is especially necessary in warm weather." Lancet. ANNUAL SALE, 10 MILLIONS. Of all Grocers, Druggists, & Min. Wat. Dealers. BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

Ladies

Do you want a pure, blooming Complexion! If so, a few applications of Hagan's MAGNOLIA BALM will gratify you to your heart's content. It does away with Sallowness, Redness, Pimples, Blotches, and all diseases and imperfections of the skin. It overcomes the flushed appearance of heat, fatigue and exitement. It makes a lady of THIRTY appear but TWEN-TY; and so natural, gradual, and perfect are its effects, that it is impossible to detect its application.
